Capitol Tower Fire May Trap People Up High

By GORDON WINTERS and DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writers

After the last complete fire safety inspection of the State Capitol, ex-State Fire Marshal Joe Plata ordered 20 "deficiencies" corrected.

Today, more than 4½ years later, some of the corrections still have not been made.

And some are arguing that at least some of the remaining "corrections" should not be made, that they would destroy the special character of the Tower on the Plains.

The changes Plata ordered ranged from the simple (installing exit signs) to the radical (installing a second stairway in the tower).

Fourteen of the corrections have been made. Five of them, relating to the storage of flammable liquids, were disposed of when state laboratories were moved from the building.

Other corrections made include installing fire extinguishers, installing smoke detection and manual fire alarms, installing emergency lighting, reducing overcrowding and installing automatic fire extinguishing equipment in the range hoods in the cafeteria.

Sightseers Can't Climb Down
At the same time some relatively simple remain undone. For example, sightseers on the observation deck on the 14th floor of the building would find their exit by stairway blocked by bars, a screen and a gate in case of a fire.

According to Robert Ripley of the state building division, the gate is a "temporary solution that became permanent." He said it was placed there to prevent children on the 14th floor observation deck from vandalizing the stairwell and entering offices on the ten floors of the tower.

Another simple change that has not been made is the installation of a "panic bar" door latch on the stairwell in the tower. That change was recommended as long ago as 1947, according to fire marshal office records.

It has long been recognized that fighting fires in the Capitol poses horrendous problems, particularly fighting fires in the tower.

There are ten floors of offices crammed into the tower, which was originally intended to be used for storage, according to Ripley.

Smoke, Gases Would Fill It

Lincoln Fire Chief Dallas Johnson has said the tower would fill with smoke and deadly gases in the event of fire. The only exits from the tower are four small elevators which hold a handful of people, and one stairwell.

Because the lower floors of the Capitol spread out horizontally, fire fighting equipment is blocked from reaching the tower. Even if trucks could pull right up to the tower the equipment would fall short of reaching the upper floors.

Although five alarms have been installed in the Capitol, that system is not connected directly to the alarm office at the Lincoln Fire Department.

Under the present system, audible alarms ring at the location of smoke in the Capitol and lights go on at a basement console and, after hours, at a console manned by a guard, but someone must notify the fire department by phone in case of fire.

Ripley and Paul Stoehr, who heads the building and grounds division, contend that this method is the equal of having an alarm system connected directly to the fire department and noted that it cuts down on costly false alarms.

They also note that fire hoses are scattered around the Capitol for emergency use.

People To Be Removed

In ten months or so the danger to people working in tower offices will be removed by removing the people, according to Stoehr and Ripley, when those offices are moved to the new state office building which is now under construction.

It is perhaps ironic that when those people are out of the tower, work will probably begin on making the tower stairway safer in case of a fire.

Ripley said planning is underway to install fire doors between the floors in the tower. Funds for that remodeling, which Ripley estimated would cost between $35,000 and $35,000, were appropriated by the 1974 State Legislature but never used.

Other changes are also in the planning stage. Stoehr and Ripley hope to persuade the Legislature to give them enough money to move the cafeteria back to the spot for which it was originally intended, now occupied by the State Motor Vehicles Department.

This would bring the cafeteria into compliance with a provision in the fire code specifying that a cafeteria must have more than one exit. Another benefit, Ripley noted, would be access to an outdoor courtyard where people could eat in pleasant weather.

Ripley Opposes Some Changes

There are some changes Plata recommended, which Ripley adamantly opposes.

He contends that interpretation of the federal fire safety code varies considerably with who is doing the interpreting.

"Joe Plata went absolutely by the book," he said.

"That might be one of the reasons he isn't state fire marshal any more," Stoehr said.

Ripley cited — as examples of Plata sticking to the rules — his order that all doors on first floor offices be set back, so they could swing outward in the direction of exit without blocking anyone's path in the corridor.

The next fire marshal, Ace Becker, said the present doors were allowable under the rules, Ripley said. The newest fire marshal, Martin Dineen, who has been in office only a month, said he had formed no opinion on the fire safety of the Capitol.

If all Plata's recommendations had been followed, Ripley said, every black walnut door with their solid bronze fixtures would have been replaced. "He wants to make the place look like a factory," Ripley said.

"Where do you draw the line?" Ripley asked. He feels that at some point the historical value of the building should outweigh safety considerations.

Bringing the Capitol, sometimes referred to as the eighth wonder of the world, up to date with modern fire codes would "cut the heart of this precious building," Ripley said.

Money Gone But Wife Safe

Fremont — John Gruenebaum lost $200 in Social Security payments tucked away in a tin box, his birth certificate from his native Germany and keepsakes from his 82 years on earth.

But he was a thankful man Sunday after spending several terror-filled hours fearing for his wife's life.

Shortly after leaving his wife, Lena, to go to the grocery store, a tremendous explosion ripped the Pathfinder Hotel in Fremont where their second floor apartment was located.

"I dropped everything and I ran," he said. "When I got downtown the police and the highway patrol and the firemen were all holding their hands up and waving all around."

Kept Going

"I walked through a red light and they yelled 'Hey you, come back here,' but I kept going. The firemen tried to stop me, but I got to the north side of the hotel and I could see smoke pouring out of our apartment."

"I asked a good-natured man if he would take me to the hospital, and he did. When I got there, I waited and waited."

"I was just shaking, I couldn't control myself. Finally they wheeled her in on a wheelchair. Boy was I tickled."

His wife has a foot problem and suffered only cuts and bruises in the fire, thanks to firefighters who rescued her from the building by ladder.

Worst Since 1904

Gruenebaum said it was the worst thing he had experienced since being trapped in a tornado in 1904.

The elderly couple spent the night in a local motel, but found an apartment Sunday with the help of the Red Cross.

Many of the residents of the hotel were elderly, Gruenebaum said, and will probably need help in finding housing.

Most Stayed Calm

Janey Watkins, president of the Fremont Towers Community Club said the victims of the tragedy remained calm until most were picked up by friends or relatives.

"They were just as sweet, bless their hearts. They seemed so grateful for what we could give them," she said.

The residents of the Towers spontaneously took up a collection Sunday to help the victims of the tragedy.

Still in Shock

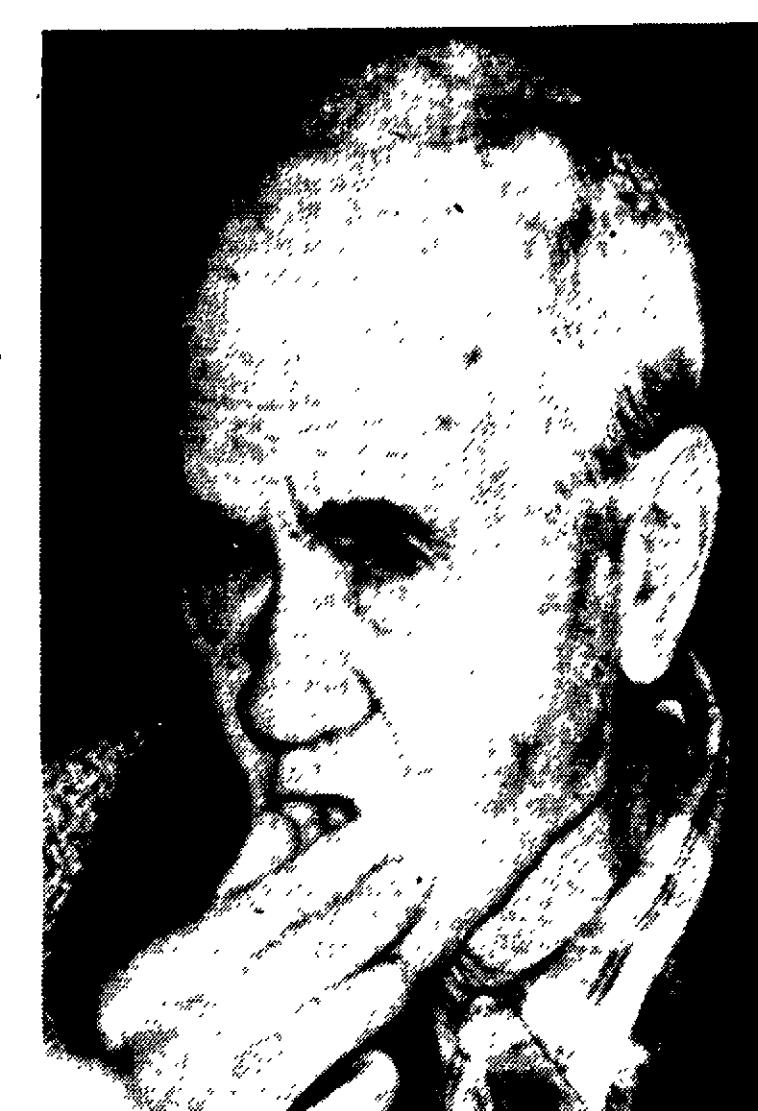

"It might be a couple of weeks before they really start coming in. The people are still in shock. But we'll be here," she said.

Mrs. Romans said many people have offered temporary or permanent housing in Fremont for victims of the fire and that there is enough housing available in the community to accommodate them.

"The response has been great. This thing has affected every person in this community in one way or another," she said.

The Red Cross established a relief fund Sunday and promised that all funds will be restricted to direct relief of victims of the Pathfinder tragedy.

Contributions can be sent to the Red Cross Annex, Dodge County Courthouse, Fremont.

Junta In Power In Ecuador

QUITO, Ecuador (AP) — Ecuador's three top military commanders took over the government early Sunday from President Guillermo Duran Arcentales, head of the army and considered the junta leader. Vice Adm. Alfredo Poveda of the navy and the recently promoted air force chief, Gen. Luis Leoro Franco.

Just hours after a palace wedding for his daughter, the 53-year-old Rodriguez, a general, read a note to the nation saying he was ending his rule "without there having been the slightest military pressure." Rodriguez himself seized power in a military coup.

The new three-man junta promised to abide by the 1968 constitution and to turn over power to an elected civilian regime at the end of 1977. Though Quito was calm, the junta declared a state of siege — a modified form of martial law — and a curfew throughout the Andean nation of six million. The three men were expected to begin organizing a cabinet.

Junta members taking charge, after initially proclaiming their government from an army base north of Quito, were Gen. Guillermo Duran Arcentales, head of the army and considered the junta leader, Vice Adm. Alfredo Poveda of the navy and the recently promoted air force chief, Gen. Luis Leoro Franco.

The only immediate opposition to the junta came from the prison cell of Gen. Raoul Pumal Velsco, who was arrested Friday after he had resigned his cabinet post as public works minister and had reportedly argued with his military superiors.

"Together with the soldiers and the free men of our country I will continue the struggle for the welfare and the security of the authentic Ecuadorian people," Pumal said in a communiqué sent to Radio Quito.

He denounced Duran as a man "insufficiently adept to understand that the power of the state should be used for the interest of the majority."

Shortly after Pumal's declaration was broadcast, Radio Quito was closed down and the editors of El Comercio, the newspaper which owns the radio station, were locked in their building by police.

The resignation ceremony in the presidential office was attended by about 70 high-ranking officers but only a few members of Rodriguez's cabinet, which resigned en masse on Wednesday and precipitated the crisis.

Rodriguez, who took power from civilian President Velasco Ibarra in a coup on Feb. 16, 1972, left the palace by the front door with his family and was driven to his private home by a small group of military aides. His son Guillermo was in tears.

It was thought earlier that the wedding of 20-year-old Nancy Rodriguez to a medical student would provide a convenient truce among Ecuador's generals, who had discussed the ultimate goals of the military regime heatedly ever since the Rodriguez cabinet resigned.

Two women identified Sunday were Mildred Swearingen, wife of a local minister, and Eunice Sexton, wife of Fremont School Supt. Lloyd Sexton.

They were reportedly attending a PEO meeting in the hotel at the time of the explosion. All but two of those at the meeting were accounted for.

Mr. Swearingen and Mrs. Sexton were in the hotel to attend a meeting, and Walline was one of the three gas company employees who were in the basement to investigate a reported gas leak," Gossett said.

Gossett praised the State Patrol identification unit and local dentist Larry Gausman for their work in identifying the bodies.

Engineers Inspect Building

Three structural engineers inspected the building Sunday and recommended that it be demolished to allow firemen to continue the search.

All hope for survivors has been given up; officials agreed that anyone would have drowned in the eight to ten feet of water that was pumped from the basement.

Hospital spokesmen said none of the 13 persons hospitalized Saturday was injured seriously.

Nebraska National Guardsmen and law enforcement officials cordoned off the downtown area around the hotel to keep out sightseers.

12 Victims Identified

Authorities have released the identities of twelve victims of the explosion Saturday at the Pathfinder Hotel in Fremont.

The dead are:

Mayne Spence, hotel resident.
James Haines, hotel resident.
John and Ruth Delashaw, hotel residents.

Carson Rebb, 75, rural Hooper farmer.

Mildred Swearingen, wife of Fremont Presbyterian minister.

Eunice Sexton, wife of a local minister.

James Walline, 47, Fremont gas company worker.

Carl Strong, 44, Fremont gas company worker.

Chi Chong Chan, 29, and his wife, Kit Yea Chan, 25, both of Lincoln, who were temporary employees of Brown Drug located in the hotel.

Louis Huska, Fremont barber.

rather than trucks to transport the supplies. He added that the clash developed when one of the army's armored vehicles collided with a guerrilla truck, killing three Palestinians.

The spokesman said the Palestinian leadership, seeking to contain the incident, returned the captured vehicles to the army but this was not confirmed by the army communiqué.

As the convoy bogged down, Christian gunmen recaptured the strategic "Castle of the Cats," an old, shanty building in a commanding position on the outskirts of one of the camps.

Junta In Power In Ecuador

QUITO, Ecuador (AP) — Ecuador's

three top military commanders took over the government early Sunday from President Guillermo Rodriguez Lara, who led the nation for nearly four years. Rodriguez resigned after five days of political confusion and sporadic violence.

Just hours after a palace wedding for his daughter, the 53-year-old Rodriguez, a general, read a note to the nation saying he was ending his rule "without there having been the slightest military pressure."

Attack Aims To Reach Camps

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — About

5,000 Palestinian guerrillas launched a major attack Sunday to reach suburban refugee camps blockaded by Christian militiamen. A police spokesman said the Christians "are holding fast with covert support" from government armored cars.

As fighting raged into the night, the spokesman placed the day's casualty toll at 60 killed and 78 wounded.

Beirut's hotel war "is in full blast again," he said, and fighting was reported in northern, eastern and southern Lebanon and in the mountainous Chouf district behind Beirut. Lebanon's nine-month-old civil war has claimed nearly 8,000 lives.

The war is over Moslem demands for political and economic reforms and Christian resistance to them until the government clamps down on the Palestinian guerrillas.

An army communiqué said the army have been blockading two refugee camps for six days. The guerrillas made their main assault following night-long mortar and rocket barrages against Christian neighborhoods ringing the refugee camps.

An attempt by the army to send a food convoy into the camps failed when it was captured by hundreds of armed men in the Moslem neighborhood of Chiah.

The army said a column of armored personnel carriers set out to transport food to the Tel Zaater camp following an agreement with the Moslem political leadership, but it was attacked by Palestinian guerrillas and their left-wing Moslem allies.

An army communiqué said the army guerrillas captured one tank and three armored cars and wounded the column commander and many of his soldiers.

A guerrilla spokesman accused the army of violating the agreement by using armored personnel carriers rather than trucks to transport the supplies. He added that the clash developed when one of the army's armored vehicles collided with a guerrilla truck, killing three Palestinians.

The spokesman said the Palestinian leadership, seeking to contain the incident, returned the captured vehicles to the army but this was not confirmed by the army communiqué.

As the convoy bogged down, Christian gunmen recaptured the strategic "Castle of the Cats," an old, abandoned building in a commanding position on the outskirts of one of the camps.

Military Unions Are Considered

WASHINGTON (AP) — America is going into its 200th anniversary year facing the possibility that at least two labor organizations will try to organize its armed forces into military unions.

In one case, the largest union of federal government employees in the nation expects to decide before the Bicentennial year ends whether it will attempt to organize active duty U.S. servicemen and women.

In another instance, a union called the Association of Civilian Technicians already has decided to pass out sign-up cards to some 700,000 Army, Navy and Air Force reservists, but has not yet taken that actual step.

A third union, the National Maritime Union, headquartered in New York City, also has begun consideration of organizing the armed forces.

The question of whether to organize the active-duty armed forces is scheduled to be decided at the September annual convention of the 300,000-member American Federation of Government Employees, a major AFL-CIO union that says it represents more than 700,000 civilian federal workers.

AFL-CIO President George Meany, who opposed one attempt by some members of the Armed Forces to organize into a union during the Vietnam War, has taken no position on the current plans, an AFL-CIO spokesman said.

OAU Delegates Divided On Angola

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Delegates to the summit conference of the Organization of African Unity peace summit on Angola at the request of pro-Popular Movement (MPLA) delegates. Neto is not attending the conference.

One group wants OAU recognition of the Soviet-backed Popular Movement while the other supports a resolution calling for a coalition government with no foreign intervention.

Peter Onu, OAU assistant secretary-general, gave the delegation breakdown. He said Uganda and Ethiopia had not taken sides.

Leaders of two Western-backed factions in Angola called Sunday for more U.S. aid and said they would give up their positions as a peace gesture if Agostinho Neto of the Popular Movement would do the same.

"I am not fighting to be president," said Joao Savimbi of the National Union (UNITA). Holden Roberto of the National Front (FNLA), loosely allied with UNITA, said he would also step down.

Both men were excluded from debates on the second day of the Organization of African Unity peace summit on Angola at the request of pro-Popular Movement (MPLA) delegates. Neto is not attending the conference.

Speaking to newsmen, both Savimbi and Roberto called for a cease-fire and elections in Angola. Savimbi said that unless all three factions joined in a government of national unity, "the fighting will go on for years."

Both criticized the United States as providing skimpy support against the MPLA. Savimbi said the U.S. Senate vote to cut off arms aid was an abdication of American responsibility. But he said UNITA could keep on fighting without U.S. weapons, with the aim of a military mainland to the embassy situated on Lagos island.

The attack followed similar ones on the U.S. Consulate in the northern city of Kaduna and the United States Information Service office in the western state capital of Ibadan last week.

In the Sunday march, demonstrators commandeered several buses to help take them to the embassy. They carried placards bearing such slogans as "Gerald Ford is a big fool," "Americans must go," and "We want to fight in Angola."

On arrival at the embassy, some of the demonstrators managed to break open the iron gate into the circular driveway. They marched around the driveway, threw sticks and stones and plastered posters on embassy windows before being persuaded to leave by police.

Late Sunday, two squads of armed Nigerian police were guarding the embassy and extra security precautions were being taken at the residence of Ambassador Donald Easum.

The attack was the culmination of a protest demonstration in which some 2,000 Nigerian students, university lecturers, workers and others carrying anti-U.S. placards marched four miles from Yaba on the Nigerian mainland to the embassy situated on Lagos island.

Juice
...only 3.3¢ per KWH.
(1000 WATTS PER HOUR)

Your electricity is still a great buy...better by far when compared with your other living expenses.

Electric costs have risen about 70% over the past 20 years.

But almost everything else you need is up 200% or more in the same period.

Just compare...

Shoes	$5.00	$30.00
Bread	15¢	60¢
Automobile	$1500	$6000
Movies	75¢	$2.50
Gasoline	29¢	60¢
Postage (1st Class)	3¢	13¢

As you can see, most of the things we buy have risen over 200%.

Now your electric rates must play catch up.

During the last 20 years, most consumer items have been slowly increasing in cost each year. Can you imagine your reaction if a pair of shoes had started at $5.00, then dropped to $3.00 for several years before rising to $30.00 overnight? That's about what has happened to electric rates. For several years after 1955, your electric rates actually decreased. It wasn't until 1973 and 1974 that the energy crunch finally turned things around. If the cost of electricity had gradually increased during the past 20 years in a manner similar to that of other goods and services, the increase in wholesale electric rates in 1976 might only have been 10% instead of the 65% increase that Lincoln Electric System must pay to the Nebraska Public Power District this year. This, however, was not possible under the public power system. We can charge only enough for the electricity we sell to retire indebtedness and pay for operations and maintenance of our system.

What other costs does LES have to pay?

The wholesale cost of electricity, while a major part of the LES budget, is not the only culprit. It is but a reflection of other costs that have been increasing in much the same manner. In just the last year, coal, our major fuel in electric generation, has increased over 40%. Oil prices are up 177%, and materials such as poles, transformers, cross-arms and wire have kept pace in this ever-rising spiral. In 1967, a wood pole (45 ft.) cost $61.00. In 1975, the same pole had increased to $147.00, or a 188% increase. In the same time period, an 8-foot cross-arm which originally cost $3.94 is now $12.21, or a 212% increase.

Here's how your rates compare with other nearby cities:

	670 KWH (average residential usage)
Des Moines	$31.35
Kearney	28.47
Denver	25.00
Omaha	22.66
Lincoln	22.44
Topeka	22.08

*plus fuel adjustment tax

And look at these East Coast rates:

New York City	$51.24
Philadelphia	28.47
Baltimore	27.95

The next time your bill comes, remember these things...

1. Lincolnenites are paying larger electric bills than they did 20 years ago because they are using over three times as much electricity now.
2. For nearly a quarter century the per-unit cost of electricity decreased. It has only been in the last 3 to 4 years that the cost of electricity has started to increase with the cost of production.
3. Even with the recent rate increases, Lincoln's rates will continue to be among the lowest in the nation.

Military Unions Are Considered

WASHINGTON (AP) — America is going into its 200th anniversary year facing the possibility that at least two labor organizations will try to organize its armed forces into military unions.

In one case, the largest union of federal government employees in the nation expects to decide before the Bicentennial year ends whether it will attempt to organize active duty U.S. servicemen and women.

In another instance, a union called the Association of Civilian Technicians already has decided to pass out sign-up cards to some 700,000 Army, Navy and Air Force Reservists, but has not yet taken that actual step.

The military in at least three other western nations is organized, with some degree of union representation in the military forces of The Netherlands, Sweden and West Germany.

In Washington, the Pentagon said in a policy statement that if "the collective bargaining process were applied (to a) military environment, command authority could suffer erosion, which in turn could lead to a decline in our national capability to perform our basic national defense mission."

Privately, one Pentagon spokesman has said, "We'd fight it to the death. There's no way you can have an Army that way."

Vincent Paterno, president of the civilian technicians union, said his union of 8,000 members is preparing to distribute the union sign-up cards to the reservists, but he would not say how the union will go about its organizing activities.

"I would rather not say how at this time," he said. "We expect quite a bit of Department of Defense antagonism but we don't expect it will be done by standing at the gates (of military installations)."

Cuba To Continue Aid

Havana — Carlos Rafael Rodriguez, Cuba's deputy premier said Cuba would continue to provide aid to Angola's Popular Movement regardless of any resolution by the Organization of African Unity. He insisted Cuba's assistance conformed not only with the principles of "proletarian internationalism," but also that "it is legal in international law, because we are asked for help by an established government that has now been recognized by 40 states — 22 of them in Africa."

U.S. Threatens Veto

United Nations — Preparing for the debate on the Middle East that starts Monday in the United Nations security Council, the United States has informed major Arab states that it would veto any resolution approving the participation by the Palestine Liberation Organization in the Geneva talks or that sets new conditions for an over-all settlement.

Banks Said Sound

Washington — James E. Smith, the comptroller of the currency, regulator of all federally chartered banks, denied a report in the Washington Post that the First National City Bank and the Chase Manhattan Bank were on the comptroller's "problem" list because they had a relatively large volume of loans that might not be repaid. He said both banks "continue to be among the soundest banking institutions in the world."

U.S. Embassy Protest Scene

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — Angry Nigerian demonstrators protesting United States policy toward Angola broke into the grounds of the U.S. Embassy on Sunday, plastered slogans on windows and threw sticks and stones at the building. No injuries were reported.

The attack was the culmination of a protest demonstration in which some 2,000 Nigerian students, university lecturers, workers and others carrying anti-U.S. placards marched four miles from Yaba on the Nigerian mainland to the embassy situated on Lagos island.

The attack followed similar ones on the U.S. Consulate in the northern city of Kaduna and the United States Information Service offices in the western state capital of Ibadan last week.

In the Sunday march, demonstrators commandeered several buses to help take them to the embassy. They carried placards bearing such slogans as "Gerald Ford is a big fool," "Americans must go," and "We want to fight in Angola."

Late Sunday, two squads of armed Nigerian police were guarding the embassy and extra security precautions were being taken at the residence of Ambassador Donald Easum.

On arrival at the embassy, some of the demonstrators managed to break open the iron gate into the circular driveway. They marched around the driveway, threw sticks and stones and plastered posters on embassy windows before being persuaded to leave by police.

Thousands File Past Chou's Body

TOKYO (AP) — Thousands of mourners lined up for miles in Peking on Sunday as the body of Premier Chou En-lai was brought to Papaoshan Cemetery for cremation, the Japanese news agency Kyodo reported from the Chinese capital.

Chou, China's only premier since the Communist victory in 1949, died Thursday of cancer at the age of 78.

Chairman Mao Tse-tung was not listed among those visiting the hospital although he heads the official funeral committee list.

Mourners "stood in silent tribute in front of the remains of Comrade Chou En-lai and extended sincere sympathy to Comrade Teng Ying-chao," Chou's widow, a member of the party's Central Committee and her late husband's "comrade in arms," Hsinhua said.

"As mourners entered the not-so-large hospital room they tried to hold back their emotions but burst into tears upon seeing the bust," according to the Asahi newspaper correspondent.

Hopefuls Woo Iowa Democrats

By LYNN ZIMMERMANN
Star Staff Writer

Sioux City, Iowa — The speeches, handshaking and piñata-waving were over. The tattered remains of styrofoam coffee cups, several thousand hot dogs and campaign posters were the only remaining evidence that five Democratic presidential hopefuls had been there.

The scene was Sioux City's Municipal Auditorium Sunday night.

While the convention floor was quiet following an afternoon of spirited politicking, Iowa Democrats got an inkling that there are political fights to come.

No Clear-Cut Favorite

No one Democratic presidential candidate is the clear-cut overall favorite in the Hawkeye State. On Jan. 19, Democrats begin the process leading up to

C. Davis Found Guilty Of Three Felony Charges

Omaha (UPI) — Clifford H. Davis, 49, former coordinator of a prisoner release project for the Nebraska Urban League, was convicted Friday of three felony counts involving drugs and possession of a firearm.

A Douglas County District Court jury deliberated through the day before finding Davis guilty of illegal possession of a tranquilizer, possession of heroin with intent to deliver and possession of a firearm by a felon.

Davis was ordered held without bond pending appeal.

He was charged following a police raid at his apartment last October in which police said they found the drugs and $1,600 in cash. A pistol was found outside on a balcony, they said.

Davis was approved for the work release job in 1973 upon recommendation of Public Defender Frank Morrison. The appointment had been opposed by Douglas County Sheriff Ted Janing because Davis had spent 22 years in prison on convictions for bank robbery, burglary and narcotics possession.

Police Arrest 2 For Burglary Of Local Home

Lincoln police arrested two men Sunday night in connection with the theft of more than $1700 worth of items from a house in northwest Lincoln.

The theft had been reported to police Sunday, but it was thought to have occurred sometime last month. Among the items taken and recovered were a black spinet piano, a floral couch, color TV, a book case, baby bed and three musical instruments, police said.

The owner of the house lives in Denver and didn't discover the burglary until Sunday, police added.

Federal Bureau Says Reservoir Won't Hurt Falls

Grand Island (AP) — The U.S. Bureau of Reclamation says Nebraska's highest waterfall won't be affected by the proposed Norden Reservoir east of Valentine.

The falls cascade from a small stream 75 feet over a rocky ledge.

Clarence Lewis, chief of the bureau's district planning division, said "Even with the reservoir at its highest, the falls won't be involved."

Federal officials hope to acquire the land around the falls and make it a public area. President Ford has authorized $1.65 million to start construction of the dam and O'Neill Irrigation Unit but the money has not been allocated.

Gavins Point Runoff High

Omaha (AP) — The Missouri River Division of the Army Corps of Engineers says the runoff above Gavins Point Dam last year was the second highest since 1959.

The figure is 34 million acre-feet, nearly 12 million acre-feet more than the long-term average runoff.

The Corps says the amount of water permitted record high electric energy production at the six main stem dams.

The report also said preliminary estimates put commercial barge traffic on the Missouri River at 2.3 million tons in 1975.

Unnick To Speak

The Northwest Community Development Organization will hold a meeting at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the State Federal Savings and Loan building in North Platte. Nancy Unnick of the City Urban Development Dept. will discuss proposals for improving Northwest Lincoln.

the selection of candidates for the national Democratic convention.

A straw vote taken of about 1,000 Democrats attending the mini-convention revealed that Indiana Sen. Birch Bayh was the favorite. He received 36% of the votes cast. Former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter polled a surprisingly strong 26% of the vote.

Arizona Rep. Morris Udall and former vice presidential candidate George Shriver shared third place among these Iowa Democrats. Both came away with about 9% of the vote.

Former Oklahoma Sen. Fred Harris received about 8% of the vote, while Washington Sen. Henry Jackson polled about 5%.

Alabama Gov. George Wallace only received several votes, as did Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen.

Other candidates on the ballot were former North Carolina Gov. Terry Sanford and Pennsylvania Gov. Milton Shapp.

Minnesota Sen. Hubert Humphrey, whose name was not on the ballot, received several write-in votes.

Infiltration By GOP

Apparently some crafty Republicans infiltrated the convention because former California Gov. Ronald Reagan and President Ford received several write-in votes.

Anyone could vote simply by paying a $10 admission fee. The money collected goes to Iowa Rep. Berkley Bedell, who is running for re-election to Congress from Iowa's Sixth District. The Greater Sioux City Press Club conducted the poll for the Democrats.

While the ballots may not be a true test of Iowa's Democratic political waters, Bayh has been one of the favorites. Busloads of Bayh supporters came to the convention, which attracted national attention from major news media representatives.

Five Show Up

The intense rivalry for the Democratic presidential nomination was reflected by the presence of five of the announced candidates at the convention. Seldom, if ever, have so many presidential hopefuls shown up together at a single event in any similar Midwest congressional district.

Bayh, Carter, Harris, Udall and Jackson spent the better part of the afternoon wooing

Iowa Democrats. Kathleen Kennedy Townsend, representing Shriver, her uncle, also attended the convention.

The presidential candidates stressed the need to restore the American people's trust and confidence in the nation's political institutions, its leaders, and in themselves.

Bayh Would Be Bound

Both Bayh and Carter emphasized their farming backgrounds, while Carter and Harris said they would dump Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz.

Carter said, "We need a secretary of agriculture who understands that what's best for the family farmer in this country is best for the consumers in this country."

Harris charged that Butz has turned the Department of Agriculture into the "Department of Agribusiness."

Jackson was the only presidential hopeful who talked about foreign policy. He called for detente with Russia: "To be a two-way, not a one-way street."

Firmness And Jobs

Jackson said the cornerstone of his foreign policy program would be "peace and understanding but with firmness." The foundation of his domestic policy would be a full-employment program.

Udall, who was urged to seek the presidential spot by 45 of his congressional colleagues, urged the Iowans to judge the candidates not on their rhetoric, but on their past record.

Udall noted his early leadership against the Vietnam

War, the congressional seniority system and campaign abuse.

Carter stressed his ability as a tough administrator in Georgia, where he slashed administrative costs by 50%. He called the federal bureaucracy "horrible, overweight and confused," and said he would cut wasteful federal programs.

Transcendental Role Cited

Bayh, in an apparent reference to Carter, said, "The role of the presidency is more than running a bureaucracy. People want a leader who can make them believe again."

Harris called for a return to the basic American principle of "equal rights for all."

While the five candidates disagreed on many issues, they all said they agreed on one thing. They want to put a Democrat in the White House next November.

State Labs To Investigate Pius X Fire

Fire officials expect to have new information Monday concerning a fire which did more than $5,000 damage to Pius X High School, 6000 A St., early Saturday.

The fire was "pretty much contained" in that office, Durst said, but smoke and water damage hit other parts of the building.

Firemen were called to the scene shortly after 1 a.m. by a neighbor who saw smoke coming from the roof of the classroom section nearest A Street. The blaze was brought under control in a matter of minutes, Durst said.

While the convention floor was quiet following an afternoon of spirited politicking, Iowa Democrats got an inkling that there are political fights to come.

No Clear-Cut Favorite

No one Democratic presidential candidate is the clear-cut overall favorite in the Hawkeye State. On Jan. 19, Democrats begin the process leading up to

C. Davis Found Guilty Of Three Felony Charges

Omaha (UPI) — Clifford H. Davis, 49, former coordinator of a prisoner release project for the Nebraska Urban League, was convicted Friday of three felony counts involving drugs and possession of a firearm.

A Douglas County District Court jury deliberated through the day before finding Davis guilty of illegal possession of a tranquilizer, possession of heroin with intent to deliver and possession of a firearm by a felon.

Davis was ordered held without bond pending appeal.

He was charged following a police raid at his apartment last October in which police said they found the drugs and $1,600 in cash. A pistol was found outside on a balcony, they said.

Davis was approved for the work release job in 1973 upon recommendation of Public Defender Frank Morrison. The appointment had been opposed by Douglas County Sheriff Ted Janing because Davis had spent 22 years in prison on convictions for bank robbery, burglary and narcotics possession.

Police Arrest 2 For Burglary Of Local Home

Lincoln police arrested two men Sunday night in connection with the theft of more than $1700 worth of items from a house in northwest Lincoln.

The theft had been reported to police Sunday, but is thought to have occurred sometime last month. Among the items taken and recovered were a black spinet piano, a floral couch, color TV, a book case, baby bed and three musical instruments, police said.

The owner of the house lives in Denver and didn't discover the burglary until Sunday, police added.

Federal Bureau Says Reservoir Won't Hurt Falls

Grand Island (AP) — The U.S. Bureau of Reclamation says Nebraska's highest waterfall won't be affected by the proposed Norden Reservoir east of Valentine.

The falls cascade from a small stream 75 feet over a rocky ledge.

Clarence Lewis, chief of the bureau's district planning division, said "Even with the reservoir at its highest, the falls won't be involved."

Federal officials hope to acquire the land around the falls and make it a public area. President Ford has authorized $1,095,000 to start construction of the dam and O'Neill Irrigation Unit but the money has not been allocated.

Gavins Point Runoff High

Omaha (AP) — The Missouri River Division of the Army Corps of Engineers says the runoff above Gavins Point Dam last year was the second highest since 1898.

The figure is 34 million acre-feet, nearly 12 million acre-feet more than the long-term average runoff.

The Corps says the amount of water permitted record high electric energy production at the six main stem dams.

The report also said preliminary estimates put commercial barge traffic on the Missouri River at 2.3 million tons in 1975.

Usnick To Speak

The Northeast Community Development Organization will hold a meeting at 7:15 p.m. Thursday at the State Federal Savings and Loan building in Havelock. Nancy Usnick of the City Urban Development Dept. will discuss proposals for improving Northeast Lincoln.

the selection of candidates for the national Democratic convention.

A straw vote taken of about 1,000 Democrats attending the mini-convention revealed that Indiana Sen. Birch Bayh was the favorite. He received 36% of the votes cast. Former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter polled a surprisingly strong 28% of the vote.

Arizona Rep. Morris Udall and former vice presidential candidate Sargent Shriver shared third place among these Iowa Democrats. Both came away with about 9% of the vote.

Former Oklahoma Sen. Fred Harris received about 8% of the vote, while Washington Sen. Henry Jackson polled about 5%.

Alabama Gov. George Wallace only received several votes, as did Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen.

Other candidates on the ballot were former North Carolina Gov. Terry Sanford and Pennsylvania Gov. Milton Shapp. Minnesota Sen. Hubert Humphrey, whose name was not on the ballot, received several write-in votes.

Infiltration By GOP

Apparently some crafty Republicans infiltrated the convention because former California Gov. Ronald Reagan and President Ford received several write-in votes.

Anyone could vote simply by paying a $10 admission fee. The money collected goes to Iowa Rep. Berkley Bedell, who is running for re-election to Congress from Iowa's Sixth District. The Greater Sioux City Press Club conducted the poll for the Democrats.

While the ballots may not be a true test of Iowa's Democratic political waters, Bayh has been one of the favorites. Busloads of Bayh supporters came to the convention, which attracted national attention from major news media representatives.

Five Show Up

The intense rivalry for the Democratic presidential nomination was reflected by the presence of five of the announced candidates at the convention. Seldom, if ever, have so many presidential hopefuls shown up together at a single event in any similar Midwest congressional district.

Bayh, Carter, Harris, Udall and Jackson spent the better part of the afternoon wooing

Iowa Democrats. Kathleen Kennedy Townsend, representing Shriver, her uncle, also attended the convention.

The presidential candidates stressed the need to restore the American people's trust and confidence in the nation's political institutions, its leaders, and in the American people themselves.

Butz Would Be Bounced

Both Bayh and Carter emphasized their farming backgrounds, while Carter and Harris said they would dump Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz.

Carter said, "We need a secretary of agriculture who understands what's best for the family farmer in this country is best for the consumers in this country."

Harris charged that Butz has turned the Department of Agriculture into the "Department of Agri-business."

Jackson was the only presidential hopeful who talked about foreign policy. He called for detente with Russia "to be a two-way, not a one-way street."

Firmness And Jobs

Jackson said the cornerstone of his foreign policy program would be "peace and understanding but with firmness." The foundation of his domestic policy would be a full employment program.

Udall, who was urged to seek the presidential spot by 45 of his congressional colleagues, urged the Iowans to judge the candidates not on their rhetoric, but on their past record.

Udall noted his early leadership against the Vietnam

War, the congressional seniority system and campaign abuse.

Carter stressed his ability as a tough administrator in Georgia, where he slashed administrative costs by 50%. He called the federal bureaucracy "horrible, overweight and confused," and said he would cut wasteful federal programs.

Transcendental Role Cited

Bayh, in an apparent reference to Carter, said, "The role of the presidency is more than running a bureaucracy. People want a leader who can make them believe again."

Harris called for a return to the basic American principle of "equal rights for all."

While the five candidates disagreed on many issues, they all said they agreed on one thing. They want to put a Democrat in the White House next November.

A. C. Eichberg

A.C. Eichberg Rites Tuesday

Services will be held at 11 a.m. Tuesday for A.C. "Ike" Eichberg, a longtime Lincoln businessman and political adviser, who died Sunday at age 80.

The native Nebraskan was president of the Havelock Bank for 10 years and served as the late Gov. Victor Anderson's campaign manager and later, top aide when Anderson became governor in 1955.

Eichberg moved to Lincoln in 1910 and was employed by the Van Sickle Paint and Glass Co.

He remained associated with the firm for 29 years.

Even though business interests in Texas and Arkansas took him out of Nebraska frequently in the 1950's, Eichberg agreed to become Anderson's campaign manager and later, top aide when Anderson became governor in 1955.

Eichberg's association with the Havelock Bank began in 1954 when he was appointed vice president and a member of the board of directors. He succeeded Anderson as bank president in 1962.

Eichberg quietly worked for many civic projects, including Pershing Municipal Auditorium and Northeast High. A World War I veteran, he organized Lincoln's civil defense in World War II.

Survivors include his wife, Lillie; a daughter, Mrs. Jeanne Hughes of Golden, Colo., and two grandchildren.

Services will be at the St. Paul United Methodist Church, with burial at Wyuka.

State Labs To Investigate Pius X Fire

Fire officials expect to have new information Monday concerning a fire which did more than $5,000 damage to Pius X High School, 6000 A St., early Saturday.

Inspector Mike Durst said material from the fire scene will be examined at the state labs to help determine what caused the explosion which gutted the office of Pius Principal John Strope.

The fire was "pretty much contained" in that office, Durst said, but smoke and water damage hit other parts of the building.

The Vacation Is Over

The outlook for President Ford is dark now. He must hope that a new political dawn is soon ahead.

According to one poll, a plurality of the American people would prefer to see the country move in a conservative direction rather than a liberal one, and Ronald Reagan is the most conspicuous conservative around, if no more doctrinaire than Gerald Ford.

The same poll shows that although a majority of people have not yet committed themselves to the Reagan presidential candidacy, a great number of them respond favorably to the actor's campaign generalities: getting "gov'ment" off the back of business, talking tough to the Russians, and so forth.

Another poll shows Ford's popularity slipping to its lowest point; only 38% of the people approve of the job he is doing. This represents a slip of seven percentage points since the last poll was taken. Significantly, this latest poll was taken after Ford's return from China, indicating that the trip abroad did not help him and probably hurt.

But one point in all of this is that although Ford's job rating has suffered, there is nothing to compare it with. He is the only Republican candidate for president who is doing a job. Reagan has afforded himself the luxury of self-imposed unemployment and a late entry into the contest for the nomination and its attendant campaign hazards.

But he is now fair game, having entered the contest officially and having gone around on his first extended campaign foray as a candidate.

And Reagan is, coincidental with his first major campaign swing, just starting to get into trouble.

Observers generally sympathetic with Reagan seem to think he muffed the three-day swing in New Hampshire last week;

Good Job Of Fund Raising

According to its official publication, the Nebraska Democratic Party is troubled by the not uncommon practice of borrowing against future revenues to fund current operating obligations. That practice must stop, according to State Chairman Dick White, and thus the party is in the process of adopting new methods of fund raising and realistic budgeting which White says will put the party "on a firm financial foundation" in the future.

Not overlooked by the publication, "The Nebraska Democrat," is the other astonishing fund raising record the state's minority party has put together despite its budgeting problems.

According to a report by the party's finance committee:

The Nebraska Democratic Party's cash donations to candidates last year was more than the total money raised by the Colorado Democratic Party. The Nebraska party raised more money than Wisconsin, Wyoming, Texas; in fact, only eleven larger sounding unconvincing in his argument that the federal-to-state spending program would not raise taxes in a state with definite local tax advantages, and ill-informed about foreign policy and international developments.

And James Reston, who is probably not overly sympathetic to the Reagan cause, nevertheless made a valid point when he wrote last week that "once a man begins campaigning seriously for the presidency, as Reagan is now doing, the tests and questions change overnight. Then it is no longer whether he is merely 'attractive' or 'good on television,' though these cosmetic qualities still glitter, but whether he has the character, knowledge and experience to do the job."

Reston seems to think Reagan's understanding of what goes on in the world lacks depth and coherence. "The politician exhibition season has started in the bitter cold of New Hampshire," Reston wrote, "and this may be the best thing that has happened to Gerald Ford since he fell into the presidency. For now the reporters are putting the hard questions to former Gov. Ronald Reagan of California, when they can get at him, and the more Bonnie Ronnie talks, the better President Ford looks."

Well, Reagan is still thought to be ahead in New Hampshire, with that primary only six weeks away. And the President, at first ahead of nearly everybody and now struggling, might still fall victim to his own inept projection and the media's grossly unfair distortion of it. But Reagan is in the thick of it now and will have to do better in explaining his positions than he has since his first announced in November or our guess is he will falter — if the public insists on substance rather than emotion and simplistic dogma.

Kindred analyses are voiced by Philadelphia polisher Albert Sindlinger, who asserts that Reagan was strongest in late November, right after his Nov. 20 candidacy announcement. Since mid-summer, Sindlinger has conducted four surveys asking separate national samples of 1,100 persons to indicate their 1976 presidential first preference. In July and September samplings, President Ford led the bipartisan field. Then in late November, Reagan not only caught up to Ford but jumped ahead (16% picked

Mixed Bag—Or Grab-Bag?

REAGAN OR FORD?

Washington Star Syndicate, Inc.

WASHINGTON — December surveys matching President Ford against his GOP nomination rival, Ronald Reagan, are a mixed bag. Most of the state-level polls show ex-California Governor Reagan increasing his strength relative to the President, but several national surveys suggest that Reagan may have peaked in late November and early December.

On the national level, the Gallup Organization found the President's popularity increasing in early December, and one Gallup official — Editor Jack Feston — ventured the opinion that "it is conceivable that Ford has bounced back against Reagan." Late November Gallup polling had put Reagan ahead by 4% to 32%.

Kindred analyses are voiced by Philadelphia polisher Albert Sindlinger, who asserts that Reagan was strongest in late November, right after his Nov. 20 candidacy announcement. Since mid-summer, Sindlinger has conducted four surveys asking separate national samples of 1,100 persons to indicate their 1976 presidential first preference. In July and September samplings, President Ford led the bipartisan field. Then in late November, Reagan not only caught up to Ford but jumped ahead (16% picked Reagan, 12.1% named Ford as their first choice). By Dec. 11-17, however, the President was ahead again, being the first choice of 16.8%, whereas Reagan was the number one pick of only 12.9%. Note that Sindlinger's results reflect presidential preferences among Democrats and Independents as well as Republicans.

Meanwhile, NBC News, polling from Dec. 16-21, found Ronald Reagan leading President Ford among a nationwide sample of Republicans by 43 to 40%. NBC News polling on Nov. 4-6 had been the first to find Reagan ahead, at that time by a precarious 44 to 43%. This relatively small movement between early November and late December is compatible with Sindlinger and Gallup Organization intimations that Reagan may have climbed strongly in November and then lost some ground in December.

In various states and cities, late November and December independent surveys specifically polling Republican voters mostly show Reagan doing well.

OHIO — Nov. 11-Dec. 4 polling by the Columbus Dispatch found 53.1% of Ohio Republicans preferring Reagan, while 46.9% opted for President Ford. This was a major change from Aug. 27-Sept. 19 polling results which gave Mr. Ford the lead by 65.2% to 34.8%.

FLORIDA — A mid-December poll by the St. Petersburg Times found President Ford leading Reagan by 34 to 32% in Pinellas County (St. Petersburg). And the just published statewide "Florida Poll" carried by a number of state newspapers, showed that as of December, the race shaped up this way: Reagan — 33.5%, Ford — 33%; undecided, 33.5%. Some earlier polls had shown Reagan clearly ahead.

CALIFORNIA — A late November city poll taken by the San Francisco Examiner found Reagan leading the President by 43 to 36%. This city is much more liberal than California as a whole, which suggests that Reagan has gained since the November Field poll, which gave him a 48 to 47% statewide lead.

NORTH CAROLINA — The newest Long Marketing "North Carolina Poll," which went to interviewers in early December shows Ronald Reagan opening up a wide lead over President Ford. Back in September, Mr. Ford led by 51.9 to 39.4%. By November, his lead had slipped 49.3 to 46.8%. The December North Carolina Poll shows Reagan surging ahead, 58.3 to 35%.

OREGON — A poll published by The Portland Oregonian in December shows

President Ford leading Ronald Reagan among the local Republicans by just 43 to 42%.

This degree of independently-measured Reagan strength, even in Northern states and cities like Ohio, Oregon and San Francisco where the GOP electorate is distinctly moderate, tends to suggest that the former California governor leads among Republicans on a national basis. However, President Ford committee spokesmen maintain that their own polls show Mr. Ford ahead. According to a Dec. 28 story in the New York Times, "Ford's private surveys, which confirm that the November trend to Reagan that showed up in the Gallup Poll, still report that Ford leads in the first four primary states: New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Florida and Illinois."

In this column's first Ford-versus-Reagan poll round-up, back in November, the weight of surveys suggested that although Ronald Reagan was gaining, President Ford was still in front. As of early January, tabulation and analysis of December data suggests a very close and volatile national contest in which neither man is demonstrably ahead.

NEW YORK — Kids ask the most stumping questions ... What makes the sky blue? Is heaven as crowded as Chicago? Why not? How come snow turns black under a microscope? Why don't grownups like cockroaches?

The queries come swiftly and endlessly, and you can't turn them off with silly answers, because children know intuitively when they're being belittled — and they don't like it. Not for a minute. Enlightened educators say that if a little one asks a question and you don't have the answer, you should reply, "That's an interesting question, and I'll have to look up the answer." I used this play so often when our son was young that one of his stamping questions became, "Why did God make you so dumb, Mommy?" We could never find the answer to that one, even in our 12-volume encyclopedia.

But the ultimate punishment of our boy's pondering period when he was in nursery school was the classic question: "When will the Leaning Tower of Pisa fall down?"

I found the solution in an issue of "Science Digest," and told him all about it while he looked at a picture of the cockeyed structure and shook his head ...

The leaning tower of Pisa, in Tuscany, Italy, does not fall down because it is just plain lucky so far.

It has stood in apparent defiance of the laws of gravity for more than six centuries, but is gradually sinking and unless something drastic is done rather soon, it will suffer, and so will anyone who happens to be staying under it. It will crumble.

"Oh-oh," said our son who loves horror stories.

Each year, the University of Pisa measures the increase of the tilt of the 175-foot tower with special instruments. And every year the report is the same. It has moved, downward. As of 1968, it was leaning over an incredible 14°, 10' out of the perpendicular, and that's a shaky position to be in.

There were shudders from the listener.

The tower began its cockeyed adventure almost from the beginning. After the foundations were dug, the first of four architects to work on it — a man named Bonanno — laid the initial stone in 1174. Before the tower had risen 40 feet, it began to sag quite a bit. Another architect, William of Lambreck, took over and boldly attempted to bring the structure back on course by making the pillars in its balconies longer on one side than on the other. But the foundations continued to sink. They should have stopped the whole venture right then.

"Oh, brother!"

But they went on building it and almost 100 years later, Tommaso Pisano completed the last balcony and the belfry. The belfry was built closer to the center of gravity in another attempt to set things straight up there. But when the job was finally finished in the year 1350, it still looked a little wacky. There were 20 tons of bells on top of that tower and they used to ring out over the city, but in 1960 scientists said they'd better stop ringing because the vibrations made the tower lean even further. The town said trucks and motor scooters couldn't drive in the area because they might upset the tower

... ☆ ☆ ☆

Over the years, lots of attempts have been made to straighten the tower. In 1902, a group of tourists ran a steel cable around the base and attached it to the rear bumper of a car, then started off at top speed, hoping to pull the base under the tower. The tower remained. The bumper did not.

... ☆ ☆ ☆

Because it's stood for more than 600 years?"

"I know why," said our son.

"Because the police will come and make people stop eating the bottom, right?"

I wonder why kids ask questions when they already know the answers.

Shoe On Other Foot

Lincoln, Neb.

Old-timers have an expression: "Chickens come home to roost."

In 1972, NETV was most anxious to use the registered trade-name, "Old-Time Fiddlers," for their Brownville film of the fiddler-country-music event. Ironically, not one fiddler in their finished product performed the real old-time fiddling. Yet they argued from July 5 until October 1 with the owner of the registered trade-name, refusing to honor the fact it was a trademark registration and being used by a specific group of performers for a particular kind of fiddling.

They did not want to admit we had spent years of time, effort, labor and thousands of dollars developing the name reputation, and were using the name for a specific style of fiddling — authentic old-time traditional Nebraska fiddling of the 1880-1900 period.

Their intentions were to run right over us and have their way, regardless. Then a friend suggested the state embassies. He intervened in our behalf. They found another title quickly, and did not use our trade-name during the film, at all.

Wonder if they now realize how it feels to have someone bigger run all over you. They have had their legs only a few months, and spent less than a hundred dollars.

Chickens do come home to roost, and shoes do get on the other foot.

Salaries Compared

Blair, Neb.

Gov. J. J. Elm is an effort to set a good example in holding down costs of government told our Unicameral approximately three years ago that $5,000 a year was adequate for his services as our chief executive. This did not deter the Unicameral from giving whopping salary raises to other elected state officials which included raising the salary of our Lieutenant Governor to the same salary as that of our governor — an unprecedented act of generosity.

What better time than now to review the need for raising the annual salary of our top executive, if for no other reason in the interest of proper prioritization, what with the hand football coach of the university now receiving about $10,000 a year more than our governor and around 30 or more of our state university department heads, professors, etc. receiving considerably more than the top official of our state.

Setting Figures Straight

Lincoln, Neb.

The Star put together a good story on drought in its Dec. 31 issue. I was pleased to see the extensive treatment of Dr. Rosenberg's proposed project to develop a "drought strategy" for Nebraska.

Some clarification of figures attributed to me on Page 3 seems desirable. In the last couple of years, Nebraska farmers have harvested crops from between 17 million and 18 million acres. Only five million are irrigated. The point I made was that we harvest crops each year from 12 million to 13 million acres of land that are entirely dependent on rainfall and directly subject to drought. Keys to drought strategy must concentrate on efforts to keep the rain on the land where it falls and to increase the efficiency with which we conserve it and use it for growth of the desired crops.

Commonly the amount of land in Nebraska that is arable or suitable for cropping is listed as 22 million to 23 million acres and that in pasture and range as over 34 million. Total acres in Nebraska are just over 49 million.

Staff Writer Dick Holman's article was timely and informative. I hope he pursues this from time to time as an area of continuing interest to Nebraskans.

The Third Request

For the third time in two years, the Farm Bureau Insurance Company is requesting a change of zone at First and Superior Streets from residential to F-Restricted. That the residents of this area should be asked for a third time to oppose a change of zone by a company such as this with its unlimited resources and readily available legal counsel seems almost reprehensible.

This further demonstrates the need for a viable comprehensive plan upon which the residents of a community may depend. It is hoped that the City Council will see fit to deny the above "spot zoning" request for a third time, at least until such time as an updated comprehensive plan has been made available to them.

Not overlooked by the publication, "The Nebraska Democrat," is the rather astonishing fund raising record the state's minority party has put together despite its budgeting problems.

According to a report by the party's finance committee:

The Nebraska Democratic Party's cash donations to candidates last year was more than the total money raised by the Colorado Democratic Party. The Nebraska party raised more money than Wisconsin, Wyoming, Texas; in fact, only eleven larger states raised more money than Nebraska. — The Nebraska Democratic Party does this with staff salaries amounting to 27% of the total budget. This compares with 40% for Colorado, 55% for Missouri, 60% for Montana and 40% for Minnesota and South Dakota. "Our percentage of staff salaries to income may be the nation's lowest," the report said.

The Nebraska Democratic Party's advances toward a solid financial footing are somewhat close to remarkable. And its financial posture is further evidence that Nebraska is closer than it has ever been to being a true two-party state.

But in putting themselves on the back for advances in numbers of voters registered Democrat and for effective fund raising and cost control, Nebraska Democrats can't ignore another set of figures: the number of elected Democrats as compared to the number of elective offices. That part of the political parity fight is still uphill.

Survey Shows Wallace As Spoiler, Not Winner

By LOUIS HARRIS
The 1976 candidacy of Gov. George Wallace for the Democratic Party nomination is one of the stranger phenomena in modern political history. On the one hand, he may go into next July's convention with as much as 15% of the delegate vote, won in the primary elections this spring. On the other, he almost always loses when he is pitted head to head against other leading Democrats and Republicans.

A recent Harris Survey, taken among a cross section of 1,475 adults, underscores these likely political outcomes. Wallace looks good because he has a solid hard-core following of about one in every six potential voters. He can be a spoiler for a number of Democratic hopefuls who might take the nomination, but he has little chance of being elected to the White House.

The following represent the most important views of Democrats and Independents:

— When Wallace is listed along with 24 other announced and unannounced candidates for the Democratic nomination, he emerges in second place, the choice of 17%, with only Sen. Edward Kennedy at 25%, ahead of him. With Kennedy out, Wallace's total rises to 19%, but he is still in second place, with

Sen. Hubert Humphrey, at 25%, receiving most of the Kennedy vote. In the same poll, former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter receives only 2% of the vote.

— Despite this impressive margin, the limitations of Wallace's vote-drawing capacity become evident when he is pitted against Carter directly. Wallace is known to 34% of the country, and Carter, only to 33%, and every expectation is that Wallace would roundly defeat Carter in such a pairing. But among the cross section of 1,151 Democrats and Independents, Carter wins by a close, 43-38% margin, with 18% undecided.

Significantly, Carter defeats Wallace by nine points or more in every region, except the South, where Wallace outlasts Carter by a thumping 55-39%. The common presumption is that if Carter can defeat Wallace in Florida, the Georgian will become a real possibility for the Democratic nomination, and Wallace will be through. But if Wallace defeats Carter, the Georgia will be finished.

However, it is possible that a Wallace victory in Florida means only that he is stronger than Carter in the South, for a national contest between the two shows that Carter is much more popular than Wallace outside the South.

— When Wallace is pitted against Sen. Hubert Humphrey in a head-to-head contest for the Democratic nomination, Humphrey wins decisively by a 61-39% margin. The Minnesota senator defeats the Alabama governor by close to three to one outside the South and loses in that region to Wallace by only a slender, 46-43% margin.

Among the electorate as a whole, the following results emerge:

— If Wallace is nominated by the Democratic convention and no third-party opposition crops up, the Alabama governor loses 56-30% to President Ford and by an even wider 57-27% to Ronald Reagan.

George Wallace has the power to show up strong in a field of six, eight or 10 candidates running in a state primary and to have leverage in a wide-open Democratic convention. But he appears unviable as a man who can make a successful run for the White House.

The peek-a-boo Floradora girls sent our grandfathers' blood pressure soaring. Strong men clenched their throats and staggered into the nearest saloon for a beer.

Those were the days, my friends.

As a juvenile reporter, I got to interview the girls behind the fans. A lively and rewarding life. We didn't have to be too accurate, a minefield that lies in wait for reporters who write about big utility companies.

"What do you want me to do? Stand on my head?" cried Sally Rand. The photos had been shooting her up one side and down the other, crying: "Just one more, Sally!"

"They can't do this to an artist!" said Sally Rand. And the police hauled her off to the city's moan-and-wail.

The art of those bouncing days was concealment. (Today it's revealing. But what can the poor girl do for an encore?)

Faith Bacon was known across the nation as the Deerstalker.

"I wore eight leaves," said Faith. "And the deer was trained to eat them off, one by one. In an artistic order."

Faith came out of the Waldorf-Astoria's Park Avenue entrance in New York. She was dressed in costume for, she explained to the police later: "I was late for the afternoon show, see?"

She was leading her co-worker, the deer, on a leash. While the doorman was whistling up a cab, the deer went into his act.

Lose Money On At-Home Work

By GENEVIEVE SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

Earn-money-at-home schemes all have one thing in common—the consumer pays, and the promoter usually earns the money.

Most of these schemes require you to buy something before you can begin work.

Answering ads offering huge profits for some at-home work for which there is a great demand and which requires no experience, will probably result in the consumer's losing money instead of earning it.

The Consumer Protection Division of Nebraska Atty. Gen. Paul Douglas' office and the Cornhusker Better Business Bureau warn consumers not to respond to ads promising "terrific parttime earnings."

Every year "earn money-at-home" schemes take more than a half-billion dollars out of the pockets of several million people. They seldom result in any real earnings and are oftentimes fraudulent.

If you have to "buy" anything to get work to be done at home, it may only be a plan to "sell" you something.

Address Envelopes — At home in your spare time. No typing, no selling, no canvassing. We furnish everything. Earn $40 to $60 weekly.

Ads such as this are meant to sell information, and for a small fee — usually $1 — you get a booklet explaining the offer.

In such a scheme, you are given a chance to buy unstamped double postcards which offer some product or service — oftentimes name plates, baby shoe bronzing or cosmetics.

You mail the postcards to people of your choice, and if any are filled out and returned with an order, you receive a commission. No money is paid merely for addressing and mailing the cards.

Another scheme is to make "fabulous profits" by raising chinchillas or "you can make $1-$200 per year raising rabbits in your yard or garage."

In ads like those, the pay-off for the promoter is to sell breeding animals to the consumer at very high prices. In addition, the consumer is stuck with offspring which he or she can't sell for anything like the

In fact, an example cited by the Better Business Bureau as a likely result of answering such an ad shows a total of $21 paid out by the consumer for the information booklet, postcards and stamps for postcards.

The cited example shows a $2 commission for two orders, resulting in a $19 loss to the consumer in out-of-pocket expenses in addition to time expended.

In a postal fraud case, the hearing examiner found that the average amount that could be earned by home workers responding to such an ad would be approximately 45¢ per week.

In schemes in which the ads state: "Women — $100 monthly for doing assembly work at home"; or "Men — who can solder and who are interested in earning money at home," the consumer must buy instructions and materials for making various items.

These items may be baby booties or aprons, but the ads don't tell you that you generally have to sell the item yourself.

According to the Better Business Bureau, ads which state "no selling" trick you by stating that the agreement to buy your finished product depends upon the work being "acceptable" or "up to our standards."

Nothing is ever "up to standard" and this is part of the scheme — reject everything. For practical purposes you must sell whatever you make yourself, the bureau states.

prices the promoter mentioned. Other ads don't offer home work but "ideas" for setting up a home business. For example: "Women — Do home work in your spare time. No typing, no selling, no canvassing. We furnish everything. Earn $40 to $60 weekly."

The Better Business Bureau suggests that if you want sound advice on starting a home business, write to the Small Business Administration, U.S. Department of Commerce, Washington, D.C., and ask for Bibliography No. 1, "Handicrafts and Home Businesses."

Ideas, suggestions and procedures for making money at home also are generally available at the local library.

DEAR ABBY: This is to thank you for your Thanksgiving Day column. It gave me the strength to make it through another day.

I am in the Army, stationed in South Korea, and I find it hard to be thankful for anything while I am unwillingly separated from my dear wife and two children.

I am under constant pressure from my buddies to go out with the local "girls," and I'm criticized because I won't. I am in a race with myself to see if I end up in a hospital from too much alcohol or from a nervous breakdown.

I volunteered to work today to keep my mind off the fact that it's a holiday. After reading DEAR ABBY today, you make me realize that as homesick and blue as I am, lots of people have it worse. Thank you.

THANKSGIVING IN KOREA

DEAR THANKSGIVING: Hang in there. Your letter made my day. If you'll permit me a little unsolicited advice: Stay away from the bottle. One drink is too many and a hundred isn't enough. Write home every day,

DEAR ABBY: I was glad to see in your column an item about hostesses who are always pushing food on their guests.

Thanks for saying "an ideal hostess never comments on how little a guest is eating."

I have always been a very small eater. When my hostess would call attention to how little

I was eating (or worse yet, loudly announce how "hard" she had worked preparing the meal and how "hurt" she was that I didn't "like" it), I'd proceed to stuff myself.

Then I would go home and be physically sick!

Finally, I decided that rather than subject myself to such needless torture, I would simply decline invitations from people who tried to make me feel guilty for not eating more than my stomach could comfortably hold.

EAST LIKE A BIRD

DEAR EATS: I'll print your letter for all those well-meaning food-pushers who need reminding.

Another scheme is to make "fabulous profits" by raising chinchillas or "you can make $1,800 per year raising rabbits in your yard or garage."

In ads like those, the pay-off for the promoter is to sell breeding animals to the consumer at very high prices. In addition, the consumer is stuck with offspring which he or she can't sell for anything like the prices the promoter mentioned. Other ads don't offer home work but "ideas" for setting up a home business. For example: "Women — Do home work in your spare time. All kinds. Pleasant profitable work."

The Better Business Bureau suggests that if you want sound advice on starting a home business, write to the Small Business Administration, U.S. Department of Commerce, Washington, D.C., and ask for Bibliography No. 1, "Handicrafts and Home Businesses."

Ideas, suggestions and procedures for making money at home also are generally available at the local library.

DEAR ABBY: This is to thank you for your Thanksgiving Day column. It gave me the strength to make it through another day.

I am in the Army, stationed in South Korea, and I find it hard to be thankful for anything while I am unwillingly separated from my dear wife and two children.

I am under constant pressure from my buddies to go out with the local "girls," and I'm criticized because I won't. I am in a race with myself to see if I end up in a hospital from too much alcohol or from a nervous breakdown.

I volunteered to work today to keep my mind off the fact that it's a holiday. After reading DEAR ABBY today, you make me realize that as homesick and blue as I am, lots of people have it worse. Thank you.

THANKSGIVING IN KOREA

DEAR THANKSGIVING:

Hang in there. Your letter made my day. If you'll permit me the unsolicited advice: Stay away from the bottle. One drink is too many and a hundred isn't enough. Write home every day,

FOOT IN MOUTH IN CHICAGO

DEAR ABBY: I was glad to see in your column an item about hostesses who are always pushing food on their guests.

Thanks for saying "an ideal hostess never comments on how little a guest is eating."

I have always been a very small eater. When my hostess would call attention to how little I was eating (or worse yet, loudly announce how "hard" she had worked preparing the meal and how "hurt" she was that I didn't "like" it), I'd proceed to stuff myself.

Then I would go home and be physically sick!

Finally, I decided that rather than subject myself to such needless torture, I would simply decline invitations from people who tried to make me feel guilty for not eating more than my stomach could comfortably hold.

EAST LIKE A BIRD

DEAR EATS: I'll print your letter for all those well-meaning food-pushers who need reminding.

slam without "guessing" the spade situation. He won the club lead with the ace and promptly ruffed a club in dummy.

After cashing the ace of spades, South played the A-K of diamonds and ruffed a diamond. He then drew four rounds of trumps and cashed the king of clubs.

The location of the queen of spades now presented no problem at all. Declarer led a spade and finessed the jack, confident that the finesse would succeed.

East had shown up with precisely five diamonds, four hearts, three clubs and a spade during the play, and South realized that East could not have another spade — and that the spade finesse was therefore certain to succeed.

In effect, by taking the precaution of counting East's hand, declarer was able to change a conjectural proposition into a sure thing.

Philip Morris Announces The First Major Step Since The Filter Cigarette.

'Enriched Flavor' discovery revealed for new low tar cigarette.

Ever since filters were first introduced to cigarettes the trend has been to limit cigarette tar.

And with every new refinement in filtration, the tar levels went down.

Unfortunately, in most cases so did the taste.

Regardless of all the "low tar, good taste" claims you've read; regardless of all the fancy filters and space-age filtering systems you've tried—your own taste told you: the less tar, the less taste.

This is a report on a new kind of cigarette.

MERIT. Only 9 mg. of tar. One of the lowest tar levels in smoking today.

Yet with incredible flavor.

If you're looking to become a low tar smoker, or don't particularly enjoy the taste of the low tar brand you smoke now—you'll be interested.

Smoke Cracked: 'Enriched Flavor'

After a twelve year research effort, a team of scientists at our Richmond Research Center succeeded in isolating the "key" flavor ingredients of tobacco as they exist in cigarette smoke.

By adding only those ingredients which were of extreme high quality as flavor producers yet low tar producing as well, we're now able to pack incredible flavor into a cigarette without the usual corresponding increase in tar.

The discovery is called 'Enriched Flavor.'

'Enriched Flavor.' It's extra flavor. Natural flavor. Flavor that can't burn out, can't drop out, can't do anything but come through.

We packed 'Enriched Flavor' into the tobacco used to make MERIT.

And began an extensive series of taste tests. The results were startling.

Taste-Tested By People Like You

9 mg. tar MERIT was taste-tested against five current leading low tar cigarette brands ranging from 11 mg. to 15 mg. tar.

Thousands of filter smokers were involved, smokers like yourself, all tested at home.*

The results were conclusive:

Even if the cigarette tested had 60% more tar, a significant majority of all smokers tested reported new 'Enriched Flavor' MERIT delivered more taste.

Repeat: delivered more taste.

In similar tests against 11 mg. to 15 mg. menthol brands, 9 mg. tar MERIT MENTHOL performed strongly too, delivering as much—or more—taste than the higher tar brands tested.

You've been smoking "low tar, good taste" claims long enough. Now you've got the cigarette.

MERIT. Incredible smoking pleasure at only 9 mg. tar.

Miller Rallies To Capture Tucson Open Again

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — Johnny Miller almost felt bad about winning the $25,000 Tucson Open Sunday for a near record third straight time.

The young Californian charged in front on the third hole of the final round, then fought off challenges by British Open champ Tom Watson, young Howard Twitty, former PGA champ Dave Stockton and Tom Weiskopf twice to win by three strokes with a final round 68.

"When I came up to the 16th green, the crowd gave me a big cheer," Miller, 28, who now has won $67,152 and needs only $12,841 to become golf's youngest and ninth millionaire, said. "That made me feel good, but, if I was them, I would have been rooting for someone else. I'm surprised they aren't tired of seeing the same guy win again."

The 68, a score Miller predicted he would shoot to win, gave him a 72-hole total of 14-under-par 274 and a three-shot triumph over Twitty, a 1972 graduate of Arizona State, who also had a final round 68 to win $22,000, his biggest paycheck since joining the tour last year.

Miller, who won the Tucson last year with a 25-under-par score of 263, said he would have liked a big lead going into the final round because he feels that once he gets on top he can win. As it was he and Watson started the last 18 tied for second, a shot behind Weiskopf, who eventually finished third at 278 and won $14,200.

"It was close," Miller said. "I played my game, and the other guys fell back. I never once felt I had it locked up, but once I made that birdie putt on the 16th, I knew I was in pretty good shape. I feel anytime I get in front by two strokes, I have an excellent chance to win."

By winning, Miller became the seventh player in history to win the same tournament three straight years. The record is four consecutive triumphs, and that was set by Walter Hagen in 1920s.

Weiskopf, who went into the final round with a one-shot lead over Miller and Watson, dropped back by making the turn at the long Tucson National Golf Club course in even par 26, then came back with a 60-foot eagle putt on the 15th that left him only two shots back.

But Miller, playing in a threesome ahead of Weiskopf, birdied the 16th.

NCAA Considers 'Super Division' Reorganization

By BOB OWENS
Star Sports Editor

St. Louis — The NCAA's interim Classification Committee Sunday revealed a list of 81 schools as a sample of what might become the "Super" football division of the NCAA, or Division I, if the convention here this week passes a reorganization proposal.

"We felt the chances of anybody voting for reorganization without having some idea of what it meant would be limited," NCAA president John Fuzak of Michigan State said.

Division I-A would be composed of schools currently now lumped with the superpowers in the top division, plus 26 others now in Division II.

The next step is approval of reorganization. Then a permanent classification committee will be appointed and rules set up to provide for appeals for reclassification by schools which want to move either up or down in division status.

Should all this happen, a resolution will be considered requiring the committee to complete its initial reclassification by April 1, consider all appeals by May 1 and make classifications affective Aug. 1.

The "super" division as listed by the interim committee includes members of the Big Eight, Atlantic Coast, Big Ten, Pacific 8, Southeastern, Southwest, and Western Athletic Conferences along with these independent schools.

Boston College, Florida State, Georgia Tech, Memphis State, Miami of Florida, North Texas State, Notre Dame, Penn State, Pittsburgh, San Diego State, South Carolina, Southern Mississippi, Syracuse, Temple, Tulane, Utah State, Virginia Tech, West Virginia and the three service academies — Air Force, Army and Navy.

Additional convention news:

American Football Coaches Association: Nebraska football coach Tom Osborne will be on the lecture program at 10 a.m. Monday, discussing: "Our I Formation Running and Passing Weapon."

The coaches will hold their Coach of the Year banquet Thursday evening. The winner will be chosen from among nine coaches who were named "district coaches of the year." All-voting took place after the bowl games.

Up for consideration are Joe Restic of Harvard, George Welsh of Navy, Jerry Claiborne of Maryland, Vince Dooley of Georgia, Woody Hayes of Ohio State, Bud Moore of Kansas, Emory Bellard of Texas A&M, Frank Kush of Arizona State and Darryl Rogers of San Jose State.

Women's Athletics: There will be no women's national championships instituted by the NCAA this year, according to Fuzak. But he said the question has to be faced by the association of how to proceed on the federally-mandated equality of men's and women's sports.

Fuzak said the NCAA and AIAW (Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women) will continue their joint meetings trying to resolve the problems. "Who knows what direction this will take? It's a very uncomfortable area," Fuzak added.

Baseball Coaches Meeting: Ron Fraser of Miami, president of the American College Baseball Coaches Association, said the group is opposed to several proposed NCAA rules on the sport. Including one which limits recruiting to a one-month period (May 15-June 15) while football is allowed four months and winter sports get three months for recruiting.

Baseball coaches also are opposed to the limit of 36 playing dates, limits on fall practice and squad limits.

Track Coaches Association: Bill Exum of Kentucky State announced the selection of Bob Timmons of Kansas as 1975 Indoor Coach of the Year and Ted Banks of Texas El Paso as outdoor coach. Timmons won both honors for district five while Delos Dodds of Kansas State was named district cross-country coach of the year.

Hastings Gains On Confidence

By KEN HAMBLETON
State College Writer

Even a loss can mean a significant gain for Hastings basketball coach Dr. Lynn Farrell.

"Win means a lot towards building confidence in a team, but even a loss can help," Farrell said. "We've won seven of our last eight games, and I'd have to say the loss was one of our best played and most important games we've played."

The Hastings Broncos dropped an 83-82 decision at Fort Hays, Kan. on Dec. 13 and haven't lost since.

"When we lost by only one point down there (Fort Hays) it was a sign that we were about to get untracked," Farrell said. "We had a couple of chances to win towards the end and just because we lost by a point didn't detract from the fact we had a good game."

Fort Hays, which had beaten nationally-ranked Marymount and suffered a narrow loss to Drake in games at home was also happy with the win, according to Farrell. "Both teams played well and as to who won really didn't matter. Sure, we would like to win but it wouldn't have meant we played any better than we did."

The Broncos since have won their own tournament, and two decisions over Mount Marty, including 50 of its last 53.

The game will be the first regionally televised attraction this season matching two Big Eight teams. Other opening league games Saturday find Iowa State at Oklahoma State, Oklahoma at Colorado and Kansas at Missouri.

The Huskers, meanwhile, are in the same position as last year with one big difference.

NU opens Big Eight play against a favored KSU team. It's an afternoon game. It's on a regional television. It's on a Saturday.

But this season, it's not at the NU Coliseum. It's at Manhattan.

There is the Huskers' biggest problem. Ahearn Fieldhouse has not been a hospitable place for NU.

Since the structure was opened in 1956, Nebraska teams have compiled a 4-21 record, although NU has performed well in recent years. Nebraska lost a controversial 68-64 match last year and upset the Wildcats, 58-54 in 1971.

In fact, dating back to the 1971-72 season, K-State teams have lost just three games at home while winning 30. That's a percentage of 94.3.

Kansas State has won its last 18 games at Ahearn Fieldhouse, including 50 of its last 53.

Miller Rallies To Capture Tucson Open Again

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — Johnny Miller almost felt bad about winning the $200,000 Tucson Open Sunday for a near record third straight time.

The young California charged in front on the third hole of the final round, then fought off challenges by British Open champ Tom Watson, young Howard Twitty, former PGA champ Dave Stockton and Tom Weiskopf twice to win by three strokes with a final round 68.

"When I came up to the 16th green, the crowd gave me a big cheer," Miller, 28, who now has won $987,152 and needs only $12,841 to become golf's youngest ninth millionaire, said. "That made me feel good, but, if I was them, I would have been rooting for someone else. I'm surprised they aren't tired of seeing the same guy win again."

The 68, a score Miller predicted he would shoot to win, gave him a 72-hole total of 14-under-par 274 and a three-shot triumph over Twitty, a 1972 graduate of Arizona State, who also had a final round 68 to win $22,800, his biggest paycheck since joining the tour last year.

Miller, who won the Tucson last year with a 25-under-par score of 263, said he would have liked a big lead going into the final round because he feels that once he gets on top he can win. As it was he and Watson started the last 18 for second, a shot behind Weiskopf, who eventually finished third at 278 and won $14,200.

"It was close," Miller said. "I played my game, and the other guys fell back. I never once felt I had it locked up, but once I made that birdie putt on the 16th, I knew I was in pretty good shape. I feel anytime I get in front by two strokes, I have an excellent chance to win."

By winning, Miller became the seventh player in history to win the same tournament three straight years. The record is four consecutive triumphs, and that was set by Walter Hagen in 1920s.

Weiskopf, who went into the final round with a one-shot lead over Miller and Watson, dropped back by making the turn at the long Tucson National Golf Club course in even par 36, then came back with a 60-foot eagle putt on the 15th that left him only two shots back.

But Miller, playing in a threesome ahead of Weiskopf, birdied the 16th.

NCAA Considers

'Super Division' Reorganization

By BOB OWENS
Star Sports Editor

St. Louis — The NCAA's interim Classification Committee Sunday revealed a list of 81 schools as a sample of what might become the "Super" football division of the NCAA, or Division I, if the convention here this week passes a reorganization proposal.

"We felt the chances of anybody voting for reorganization without having some idea of what it meant would be limited," NCAA president John Fuzak of Michigan State said.

Division I-A would be composed of schools currently now lumped with the superpowers in the top division, plus 26 others now in Division II.

The next step is approval of reorganization. Then a permanent classification committee will be appointed and rules set up to provide for appeals for re-classification by schools which want to move either up or down in division status.

Should all this happen, a resolution will be considered requiring the committee to complete its initial re-classification by April 1, consider all appeals by May 1 and make classifications affective Aug. 1.

The "super" division as listed by the interim committee includes members of the Big Eight, Atlantic Coast, Big Ten, Pacific-8, Southeastern, Southwest, and Western Athletic Conferences along with these independent schools.

Boston College, Florida State, Georgia Tech, Memphis State, Miami of Florida, North Texas State, Notre Dame, Penn State, Pittsburgh, San Diego State, South Carolina, Southern Mississippi, Syracuse, Temple, Tulane, Utah State, Virginia Tech, West Virginia and the three service academies — Air Force, Army and Navy.

Additional convention news:

American Football Coaches Association: Nebraska football coach Tom Osborne will be on the lecture program at 10 a.m. Monday, discussing: "Our I Formation Running and Passing Weaponry."

The coaches will hold their Coach of the Year banquet Thursday evening. The winner will be chosen from among nine coaches who were named "district coaches of the year." All voting took place after the bowl games.

Up for consideration are Joe Restic of Harvard, George Welsh of Navy, Jerry Claiborne of Maryland, Vince Dooley of Georgia, Woody Hayes of Ohio State, Bud Moore of Kansas, Emory Bellard of Texas A&M, Frank Kush of Arizona State and Darryl Rogers of San Jose State.

Women's Athletics: There will be no women's national championships instituted by the NCAA this year, according to Fuzak. But he said the question has to be faced by the association of how to proceed on the federally-mandated equality of men's and women's sports.

Fuzak said the NCAA and AIAW (Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women) will continue their joint meetings trying to resolve the problems. "Who knows what direction this will take? It's a very uncomfortable area," Fuzak added.

Baseball Coaches Meeting: Ron Fraser of Miami, president of the American College Baseball Coaches Association, said the group is opposed to several proposed NCAA rules on the sport. Including one which limits recruiting to a one-month period (May 15-June 15) while football is allowed four months and winter sports get three months for recruiting.

Baseball coaches also are opposed to the limit of 36 playing dates, limits on fall practice and squad limits.

Track Coaches Association: Bill Exum of Kentucky State announced the selection of Bob Timmons of Kansas as 1975 Indoor Coach of the Year and Ted Banks of Texas-El Paso as outdoor coach. Timmons won both honors for district five while DeLoss Dodds of Kansas State was named district cross-country coach of the year.

Hastings Gains On Confidence

By KEN HAMBLETON
State College Writer

Even a loss can mean a significant gain for Hastings basketball coach Dr. Lynn Farrell.

"Wins mean a lot towards building confidence in a team, but even a loss can help," Farrell said. "We've won seven of our last eight games, and I'd have to say the loss was one of our best played and most important games we've played."

The Hastings Broncos dropped an 83-82 decision at Fort Hays, Kan. on Dec. 13 and haven't lost since.

"When we lost by only one point down there (Fort Hays) it was a sign that we were about to get untracked," Farrell said. "We had a couple of chances to win towards the end and just because we lost by a point didn't detract from the fact we had a good game."

Fort Hays, which had beaten nationally-ranked Marymount and suffered a narrow loss to Drake, in games at home was also happy with the win, according to Farrell. "Both teams played well and as to who won really didn't matter. Sure, we would like to win but it wouldn't have meant we played any better than we did."

The Broncos since have won their own tournament, and two decisions over Mount Marty, including a 99-83 win Saturday, and outlasted Kearney State in a 93-88 two-overtime win at Kearney, this past week as evidence that Farrell is right.

"Beating Kearney on the road is a real confidence builder," said Farrell. "We thought we played well in getting things done even though we didn't shoot as well as we usually do."

"Our front line people, forwards Kert McKeone, a 6-6 junior and 6-4 sophomore Pat Hodges and 6-8 sophomore center Paul Bergman, had been carrying most of the load until the Kearney game," Farrell said. "But we got some real good play from reserve guard Dan Hollatz in that game so we're starting to look a little more balanced."

Hollatz earned a starting berth with his showing in the Kearney game and is the only starting senior on this year's Bronco team.

"We haven't been running as effectively as we have in the past, but because of that I think we're playing better defense than in the past," said Farrell.

The Broncos face Wayne this Tuesday and then open their Nebraska Intercollegiate Athletic Conference season Saturday against Nebraska Wesleyan in Lincoln. In other NIAC openers, Dana faces Concordia and Doane travels to Midland.

Defense, Penrose Passes Lift North

teams, considering we only had a week of preparation.

Penrose engineered three third period scoring drives as the North offset a 28-21 halftime deficit in the high-scoring battle filled with brilliant offensive fireworks.

He set up the go-ahead score with passes of 31 yards to Joe Smalzer of Illinois and 29 yards to Wyoming's Larry Gaines, who scored the touchdown on a three-yard run.

Then, after Stan Varner of Brigham Young recovered a fumble at the North 49, the Yanks moved to their first lead in the game, coming on Penrose's 18-yard pass to Duke Ferguson, also of San Diego State, with 7:17 left in the third quarter.

Our guys were getting open and I had great protection all afternoon," said Penrose, who won a car after being chosen the most valuable player. He hit on 12 of 15 passes for 303 yards and three touchdowns.

But, it was the North defense that closed the door on the explosive South attack after trailing 28-21 at intermission. The North gave up the final score with only five seconds remaining.

"We were looking for a wide open game and it was," said North Coach Chuck Fairbanks of the New England Patriots, who watched his quarterback engineer three touchdown drives that put the Yanks in command.

"Our guys were getting open and I had great protection all afternoon," said Penrose, who won a car after being chosen the most valuable player. He hit on 12 of 15 passes for 303 yards and three touchdowns.

The North opened a cushion three minutes later when Penrose and Gaines combined on a 73-yard scoring play. Gaines caught the pass in heavy traffic at his 40, popped free and sprinted the rest of the way to make it 42-28.

The South threatened in the final quarter, but Wyoming's Aaron Kyle all of 15 passes for 303 yards in the North's 42-35 win Sunday, received a car as the game's most valuable player.

Wildcats See 'The Good Life'

Kansas St. Eyeing Nebraska Foes

By MARK GORDON

Star Sports Writer

Kansas State's basketball team will be quite familiar with Nebraska's two major college basketball teams after this week.

Coach Jack Hartman's Wildcats travel to Omaha Civic Auditorium for a Tuesday night game with Creighton before hosting coach Joe Cipriano's Huskers in a regionally-televised afternoon game Saturday afternoon at Ahearn Fieldhouse.

The Creighton game will be K-State's final nonconference test before the Big Eight opener with Nebraska. Ranked among the nation's top 20 clubs for part of the season, KSU is not ranked now, but that could change with another win.

Creighton, meanwhile, has been victimized by somewhat erratic performances this season.

"If you look at the four games we've lost, we probably could have won them. But on the other hand, we could just as easily have lost four of the other games we've won," noted Creighton publicist Dan Offenberger. "We're very young."

"We played very poorly against San Diego (a 50-48 overtime win last Wednesday at Omaha), a team we should have done well against," he said. "Then we almost beat Minnesota (losing an 80-74 deficit).

The previous record turnout at Hughes Stadium went into the books on Nov. 2, 1948.

"We want to see the cops beat each other up," said Roger Boyette of Sacramento, who brought a van to the stadium parking lot the night before to get a good spot for the traditional tailgate party. "Besides, the Pig Bowl is the only thing in Sacramento besides St. Patrick's Day."

Marsha King said she and her friends came from Dallas, Tex., "because we don't have any sense."

Dave Carlson insisted he flew in from Denver just to see the game. "I came out to watch a bunch of 30-year-old men make fools of themselves," he said.

There's not much doubt about the major task confronting the Bluejays and Huskers when they meet KSU.

John Montefusco, pitcher for the San Francisco Giants and National League rookie of the year, reacted to the prospective move of the team to Toronto. "I ain't going," he said.

And San Francisco Mayor George R. Moscone supported the statement, announcing that he would go to Phoenix next week to try and persuade the NL owners not to approve the sale of the Giants. He will urge that the owners approve the $11 million offer of local financier Robert Laurie to accept over the $13.35 million offer of the Canadian interests.

Meanwhile the head of the stadium that would host the "Toronto Giants" predicted that the club would draw more than a million fans this year if the deal to bring the team here goes through.

Minnie Minoso, former outfielder, has been named to the Chicago White Sox' coaching staff.

FOOTBALL

Georgia Tech head football coach Pepper Rodgers named former Houston Oilers offensive center Bill Curry an assistant coach. Curry is former head of the NFL Players Association.

Columbus, Ohio (UPI) — Top-seeded Arthur Ashe fought off a stiff challenge by Andrew Patterson to win the $60,000 World Championship Tennis Classic here Sunday afternoon, 34-6, 6-4, 7-6.

The finals were played at St. John Arena on the Ohio State University campus before 6,107 fans.

Patterson, a Rhode Islander, now living in Lakeway, Tex., started with assurance, breaking Ashe in the fourth game of the first set, and coasting to a relatively easy win.

Ashe broke Patterson's serve in the eighth game and then served out for the set.

Atlanta (UPI) — Bill Walton, scoring a career high of 36 points and dominating the backboards, led the Portland Trailblazers to a 116-109 win over the Atlanta Hawks Sunday night.

Walton dropped in 17 of 22 shots from the field and grabbed 22 rebounds to dominate the game.

Before suffering the first loss in four games of their series with NHL opponents, the Soviet team firstrefused to start the game and later left the ice in protest of the Flyers' bruising play.

It took NHL president Clarence Campbell to coax the Soviets back onto the ice. A suggestion that the Russians might forfeit their $25,000 fee apparently helped, according to an NHL source.

The Russians refused to even warm up before the game until anti-Soviet signs from the Spectrum facades. The signs protested Russian treatment of Soviet Jews.

Finally, Ed Snider, chairman of the board of the Flyers, ordered security personnel to re-

It took Campbell and other NHL officials 14 minutes to convince the Russians to return and resume the game.

Evert Captures Series In Win Over Goolagong

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Chris Evert has learned her lesson about Evonne Goolagong. And she showed Sunday she has learned it well.

When the tennis darling from Florida meets her chief competitor from Australia, Evert knows she has to go all out. Sitting back waiting for something to happen is not going to get the job done.

So Evert went out and made it happen Sunday, successfully defending her Women's World Series of Tennis title with a 6-3, 7-6 victory that brought her $50,000 — the richest prize in women's sport.

"I'm taking more chances with her now and playing more aggressively and the results have been better," said Evert, who has had a long series of exciting matches with Goolagong.

"I have played her cautiously before and have lost. I like to go to the net more because it is exciting and it is challenging to me."

"I used to be nervous when I played Evonne. Now I'm very confident. I just don't worry about matches anymore."

Evert had cause to worry in the second set,

however, as Goolagong three times seized a service break advantage. But the Australian, who won $25,000 for being runner-up in the exclusive four-player tournament, double faulted at set point to lose her advantage and concentration.

"I thought I really gutted it out in the second set," said Evert.

"I thought if she had won the second set she would have won the match. She was jumping around the court like she could have lasted three more hours."

Playing on a blustery, chilly day, Evert appeared ready to win in a walk. But Goolagong, who qualified for this tournament by winning the Australian Open, fought back and appeared to have captured the momentum through the grueling second set.

In the consolation match earlier in the day, Martina Navratilova defeated Virginia Wade, 7-6, 6-0, with Navratilova earning $15,000 and Wade $10,000.

Flyers Outmuscle Soviets

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Flyers, champions of the National Hockey League, outmuscled the fitness-oriented champion Soviet Army team 4-1 in an exhibition game marred by controversy.

The Flyers built a 3-0 lead on goals by Reggie Leach, Rick MacLeish, and Joe Watson. And after Victor Kutyergin scored the Soviets' lone goal, the Flyers' Larry Goodenough wrapped up the much-ballyhooed international series with a final-period score.

Before suffering the first loss in four games of their series with NHL opponents, the Soviet team firstrefused to start the game and later left the ice in protest of the Flyers' bruising play.

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Chris Evert has learned her lesson about Evonne Goolagong. And she showed Sunday she has learned it well.

When the tennis darling from Florida meets her chief competitor from Australia, Evert knows she has to go all out. Sitting back waiting for something to happen is not going to get the job done.

So Evert went out and made it happen Sunday, successfully defending her Women's World Series of Tennis title with a 6-3, 7-6 victory that brought her $50,000 — the richest prize in women's sport.

"I'm taking more chances with her now and playing more aggressively and the results have been better," said Evert, who has had a long series of exciting matches with Goolagong.

"I have played her cautiously before and have lost. I like to go to the net more because it is exciting and it is challenging to me."

"I used to be nervous when I played Evonne. Now I'm very confident. I just don't worry about matches anymore."

Evert had cause to worry in the second set,

however, as Goolagong three times seized a service break advantage. But the Australian, who won $25,000 for being runner-up in the exclusive four-player tournament, double faulted at set point to lose her advantage and concentration.

"I thought I really gutted it out in the second set," said Evert.

"I thought if she had won the second set she would have won the match. She was jumping around the court like she could have lasted three more hours."

Playing on a blustery, chilly day, Evert appeared ready to win in a walk. But Goolagong, who qualified for this tournament by winning the Australian Open, fought back and appeared to have captured the momentum through the grueling second set.

In the consolation match earlier in the day, Martina Navratilova defeated Virginia Wade, 7-6, 6-0, with Navratilova earning $15,000 and Wade $10,000.

Flyers Outmuscle Soviets

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Flyers, champions of the National Hockey League, outmuscled the finesse-oriented champion Soviet Army team 4-1 in an exhibition game marred by controversy.

The Flyers built a 3-0 lead on goals by Reggie Leach, Rick MacLeish, and Joe Watson. And after Victor Kutrynen scored the Soviets' lone goal, the Flyers' Larry Goodenough wrapped up the much-ballyhooed international series with a final-period score.

Before suffering the first loss in four games of their series with NHL opponents, the Soviet team first refused to start the game and later left the ice in protest of the Flyers' bruising play.

It took NHL president Clarence Campbell to coax the Soviets back onto the ice.

A suggestion that the Russians might forfeit their $25,000 fee apparently helped, according to an NHL source.

The Russians refused to even warm up before the game until anti-Soviet signs from the Spectrum facades. The signs protested Russian treatment of Soviet Jews.

Police Probing Theft From Car

Taken were a radio, a tool box and six air freight parcel post shipments, police said.

Trawler A Hauler Of Lots Of Pot

Babylon, N.C. (UPI) — Authorities closed in on a 112-foot fishing trawler early Sunday at a remote location on the Pamlico River near the North Carolina coast, seizing 15 to 20 tons of marijuana and arresting nine persons.

Based on an estimate of $350 per pound for high-grade marijuana and the minimum estimated weight of the seizure, a U.S. official in Miami rated the haul as being worth about $10.5 million in street sale value.

Local officials said the haul was unloaded.

A manhunt using a helicopter was launched at daybreak and two other suspects were apprehended in the marshy area along the river, according to North Carolina At. Gen. Rufus L. Edmiston.

Japanese Farming Group Has Its Roots In Nebraska

By DOMINICK COSTELLO

Farm Editor

There is a new farm organization in Japan that began here in Nebraska. It has its own magazine and recently featured a Nebraska farmer's daughter on the cover.

The group, known as RTO, is made up of agricultural students who came to the U.S. to learn farming techniques and returned to Japan to remain in agriculture.

Approximately 80% of the students do return to Japan and do farm. Some have remained in the U.S. and continued their education. One is attending Harvard as a graduate student working on his doctorate, another is doing the same thing at Colorado State University. Several are working toward masters degrees at other American universities.

The latest group of 47 young Japanese farmers has just arrived at the university to begin a series of concentrated livestock courses. They have been living on farms and working for American farmers during the summer.

No Tax Dollars

"The program is entirely self-supporting. There are no American tax dollars in it. There is some Japanese government money in the program for administration, but most of it is paid by the students from money they have earned," explained Clint Hoover, who has worked with the program in Nebraska.

Money earned by the students goes into a fund used to cover the expense and travel of the program, plus a small spending money allowance. "If they are very frugal, it is possible for them to return to Japan with $200 in savings, but most spend it on things they want to take home," Hoover said.

Dwight Stephens, who acts as livestock coordinator for the group, was in Japan this summer for three weeks.

"The Japanese appreciate the technological information they obtain from the program, but of much greater importance is the benefit of greater international understanding by both Japanese and Americans," Stephens said.

"These young men are going to be important leaders in their national effort to make Japan 40% self sufficient in food production. If anyone in Japan can reach their goal, it will be people from this group," he said.

One possible outcome of the Japan-Nebraska arrangement is exporting things from Nebraska and Japan direct via a container shipment method.

"There are a lot of problems in both countries with setting up a system of two-way shipments, but it has some interesting possibilities," said Hoover.

Lincoln Homes

Hoover is also considering having some of the ag students live with families in Lincoln for three months while they are here in school. A similar program has been successful in Japan.

"We think it is important for the students to live in an American home. Living here in the Nebraska Center is just not exposing them to the real American lifestyle. I am hopeful of arranging some funds to help the families involved defray a part of their costs. This is something we are seriously thinking about but haven't any real concepts on yet," he said.

In past years many of the students have visited homes in the area for a meal or weekend stay, but so far none has stayed in American homes during the school portion of the program.

Stephens and Hoover have developed a stilted kind of English for lectures which seems to improve comprehension of the students. An interpreter is available to assist them with communications problems.

"You tend to drop adjectives, conjunctions and prepositions because they do as they talk English. It sounds a little strange to someone outside of the

Weekly Grain Report

A flurry of export buying and a lack of farmer selling put a little muscle into the grain market in the first week of 1976.

Export loading continues to be near the capacity of the port elevators to get the grain graded and loaded.

There are reports that a lot of grain is being shifted from large ships to small ships, barge and rail traffic across Europe as the Russians attempt to solve the delays in getting their huge worldwide grain purchases home.

Apparently they are buying grain as fast as their ports can handle it. There have been sharp increases in livestock slaughter and some scattered reports of bread rationing.

Their weather is never as good as ours, but the big problem is planning by nonfarmers in their government.

This same kind of nonfarm planning is becoming a problem in the U.S. Add in the interference from various regulatory agencies and the export ban forced on farmers by nonfarm agencies in the administration and you can see the direction we are traveling.

Agriculture still carries a huge financial stick, even if the number of farmers is declining.

In Nebraska the 1974 lending data of banks indicates that 64.8% of the bank loans were for agricultural purposes.

The figure for Kansas is 50.9%, but in New York it is 0.5%.

About one of every six banks in the nation has half of its total portfolio in loans to farmers.

One thing that keeps farmers alive is the inflated value of their property. The real estate assets on the farm should total $423.3 billion this year and the non-real estate assets will reach $130.6 billion by the end of 1976.

The estimated farm debt for 1976 is $60.5 billion.

In preparing the U.S. Department of Agriculture report, bankers were asked if the risk of lending to farmers was increasing. One hundred and ten said yes, 69 said no and nine said it decreased.

The session will cover the legal aspect of death, taxes and changes in policies concerning transfer taxes.

Increased land values during the past five years have made federal and state death taxes burdensome.

Spotlight on Agriculture

By DOMINICK COSTELLO

Some nations which have a substantial amount of the world's potash supply are thinking of following the lead of the oil producing nations in holding their product for a ransom.

This is what cost Spain its pitiful little patch of desert in Africa.

Apparently, might still makes right when you have local military power and the big nations aren't willing to use their greater military power.

If the world ever gets to fighting over food and the things required to produce it, we may yet have a method of reducing the population — rapidly.

It is about time we started weighing the cost of some of our efforts to prevent bad things from happening.

The fussing over the nitrite-in-bacon scare is a good example.

A 154-pound person would have to eat 46,245 pounds of bacon for a day for a lifetime to get enough nitrosopryrrolidine to produce a cancer.

That is more bacon than you can physically consume, but there is another side to the story. If you eat one pound of bacon without the nitrite stuff in it, you risk a quick death from botulism.

There is good reason to doubt the data on the cancer because it is based on laboratory work with rats and may have no human application at all.

Botulism is no lab experiment. Every year improperly prepared food kills some people somewhere in the nation. The addition of nitrates in food prevents that.

Since we are to be dragged kicking and screaming into the rest of the world's measurement system called metrics, we ought to learn what a metric ton is.

A metric ton is 1,000 kilograms — about 2,204.6 of our old-fashioned pounds.

A "tonne" is a metric ton in France and Germany. The Germans capitalize it but the French don't.

In Italy it is a "tonnellata"; in Britain a ton is 20 hundredweights, each of which weigh 112 pounds, making a 2,240-pound ton. The U.S. short ton weighs 2,000 pounds.

This suggests that people speak in many tons.

Anyway, for your information, we will use the word ton and put metric in front of it when writing about it in world trade stories.

The total Russian grain crop now appears to be 79 million metric tons below the planned crop. This works out to be the poorest harvest the Russians have had on a per capita basis since 1913.

Apparently they are buying grain as fast as their ports can handle it. There have been sharp increases in livestock slaughter and some scattered reports of bread rationing.

Their weather is never as good as ours, but the big problem is planning by nonfarmers in their government.

Sewer Plant Said Slipping

Omaha (AP) — Omaha's Missouri River Sewer Treatment Plant may be in danger of slipping toward the river and city officials say it could cost millions to correct the problem.

Public Works Director Terence Pesek says pipes at the plant have broken each spring for several years because of underground movement. Pesek says they are usually patched without great interference to operations.

But those problems have led to more detailed studies in recent months, and city officials say the problem could be serious.

Pesek said, "Sure there's been some speculation that it's slipping. There have been some riverbank failures, and there's no question there's a soil problem in the area."

He said, "But I don't want to alarm anyone. There's no way of knowing how serious it is until we finish studying it."

The City of Omaha has asked the Army Corps of Engineers to release water from upstream dams to make the river level higher at Omaha and hopefully stabilize the banks with the greater water pressure. But the Corps has declined the request.

Col. Russell Glenn, the district engineer, said some small towns north of Omaha might be jeopardized if the river level was increased.

Glenn said, "If their (the city's) consultant had been right, the whole plant would be in the river now. Dec. 31 was the day the world ended in their original analysis."

A report to the Omaha City Council is scheduled to be on the problem Feb. 24.

The city has hired Rutherford and Chekene, Inc., soil specialists from California for $30,000.

The underground soil conditions are important not only because of the existing plant but because the city is about to embark on a $50 million addition.

Pesek said the existing plant, which provides primary treatment of sewage is worth about $70 million.

Pesek said the site is useable in any case, since various methods can be used to stabilize and reduce ground movements.

Sewer Plant Said Slipping

Omaha (AP) — Omaha's Missouri River Sewer Treatment Plant may be in danger of slipping toward the river and city officials say it could cost millions to correct the problem.

Public Works Director Terence Pesek says pipes at the plant have broken each spring for several years because of underground movement. Pesek says they are usually patched without great interference to operations.

But those problems have led to more detailed studies in recent months, and city officials say the problem could be serious.

Pesek said, "Sure there's been some speculation that it's slipping. There have been some riverbank failures, and there's no question there's a soil problem in the area."

He said, "But I don't want to alarm anyone. There's no way of knowing how serious it is until we finish studying it."

The City of Omaha has asked the Army Corps of Engineers to release water from upstream dams to make the river level higher at Omaha and hopefully stabilize the banks with the greater water pressure. But the Corps has declined the request.

Col. Russell Glenn, the district engineer, said some small towns north of Omaha might be jeopardized if the river level was increased.

Glenn said, "If their (the city's) consultant had been right, the whole plant would be in the river now. Dec. 31 was the day the world ended in their original analysis."

A report to the Omaha City Council is scheduled to be on the problem Feb. 24.

The city has hired Rutherford and Chekene, Inc., soil specialists from California for $38,000.

The underground soil conditions are important not only because of the existing plant but because the city is about to embark on a $50 million addition.

Pesek said the existing plant, which provides primary treatment of sewage is worth about $70 million.

Pesek said the site is useable in any case, since various methods can be used to stabilize and reduce ground movements.
